CONCLUDING SPEECHES TO-DAY

HENRY N. SPAAN AND WILLIAM T. BROWN YET TO BE HEARD.

Great Crowd in the Courtroom Hear the Arraignments-Court

Yesterday the jury trying Dr. Joseph C. ing the day the jurors sat restlessly in the seats allotted to them and during the en- for Alexander, will make the closing speech the impassioned arguments made by Proseander. The jury listened with attention to miliar with the trial of criminal causes that the jury is undecided as to the evidence and the prediction was made by 5:30 o'clock this evening, and it is thought the jury will either disagree or return a verdict acquitting Dr. Alexander. The crowd was more interested in the argument than either Dr. Alexander or his wife, who was a large one. There was frequently GOVERNOR TAKES ACTION such a commotion and disorder that it was necessary for Judge Bailey to rap his gavel in an attempt to secure order. Back of the railing a large crowd stood. The inclosed space occupied by the jury, attorneys, defendant, court reporters and newspaper men was the only comfortable place in the courtroom, as outside of this a crowd of fully two hundred lawyers and other court frequenters were standing close together and uncomfortable, but still intensely interested in what was going on before the jury. The gallery was also crowded and in that portion of it reserved for women seats were all taken.

JUDGE WORN OUT. Judge Bailey has stood the ordeal wonderto-day, as the strain on the nerves of the court and jurors has been severe.

John C. Ruckelshaus opened the argumorning and devoted little of his time to commentaries on either the principal of the case or the character of the witnesses. He plunged into the evidence produced by the State and on this demanded that the jury convict Alexander and provide for his imprisonment for several years in the penitentiary. Mr. Ruckelshaus reviewed the testimony of the witnesses for the prosecution and defense. He carefully went over each statement of a witness that had been corroborated by another, or any statement the truth of which was disputed by other witnesses. Their contradictions of specific testimony had been made. Mr. Ruckelhaus spoke of the motive of the witnesses in contradicting the testimony of the prosecution. He said that the testimony of Rufus Cantrell and other ghouls was emphatic and clear and should be conclusive. He said no regard need be given to the evidence of the professional men as experts on the mental condition of the negro, Rufus Cantrell. He said that the medical men had stood by Alexander the same as they would stand by any other fellow practitioner when a prosecution directly related to the entire medical fraternity was in progress. He said the State did not adduce any testimony in rebuttal of that evidence for obvious reasons. The State had made no effort to bring out points in the prosecution which might have been made more clear by the swearing of physicians for the same reason. He told the jury of the sentiment among the physicians of the city and how it had conspired to make the prosecution encounter difficulties in securing testi-

Regarding the character of Cantrell, Ruckleshaus said he agreed with the attor-ney for the defense who had said Cantrell was a moral monster. He said he believed Cantrell to be everything that was bad, but still believed him to be a truthful witness. "It shows the character of the defendant in this case when he hired such a man as Cantrell to do his nefarious work for him," said Ruckelshaus. "The defense tried to prove that the negro was insane. What if he is insane? It only goes to show Ruckelshaus spent much time in demon-strating to the jury that, although Alexander was a man of good repute in the community before arrested for aiding the grave robbers, it was possible for him to have helped steal human bodies and still' be deserving of that reputation. Ruckelshaus said a man's reputation was based on that part of his nature that he permitted to be known to the public. According to Ruckelshaus, Alexander was a sort of Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde, and, although socially, professionally and commercially believed to be a good fellow, an excellent physician of standing in his profession, and a man of honesty and integrity in his business dealings, was still the accomplice of Rufus Cantrell and other negroes in the desecration of human graves in the cemeteries of Marion county. The prosecutor, in closing his argument, appealed to the sentiment of the jurors. He asked them to picture the graves of their loved ones despoiled of their dead by the hands of moral monsters such as Cantrell, inspired to their acts by a smart man, who, although an aider of ghouls, held a chair of standing in an edu-cational institution of the reputation of the Central College of Physicians and Sur-

FOR THE DEFENSE. Martin Hugg, for the defense, began his argument to convince the jurors of the innocence of Alexander at 11:15 o'clock. Mr. Hugg's argument was the effort of the trial. He had with much care prepared a review of the testimony and a sifting of it to show the contradictory and weak points of the prosecution and of the evidence submitted in defense which he declared to be unbiased, straightforward and honest statements of honest men of character and standing in the community. Mr. Hugg spoke until the noon recess, and at 2 o'clock resumed his argument, which was not concluded until seven minutes before 5 o'clock, the time for the adjournment of the court. The attorney spent much time in going over the four counts of the indictment against Alexander, showing what he considered to be their faults. He then took up all the evidence tending to prove guilt on either of the counts, and told the jurors secure to substantiate the charges. He said that the statements of some of the witnesses of the State were improbable to say the least, and the testimony of the ghouls was a lie from beginning to end.

Although the chief ghoul, Rufus Cantrell, had declared that he had used livery rigs for his social pleasures, Mr. Hugg said no corroborative testimony on this score had been introduced and he thought it unlikely that the jury would believe him. No testimony as to the pawning of the shotguns was introduce, Hugg said, although the pawnbroker to whom they were alleged to have been pledged was a wit-to be believed by an intelligent jury. Of ment. Cantrell he said nearly everything bad that could be said of a man. He said: furnish "You can take Cantrell and his gang and telephore." multiply them and multiply them and when you look at your result you will find a cipher, because you began with a cipher." He called the ghouls "a sweet-scented He called the ghouls "a sweet-scented gang," and speaking of Cantrell he said: "How quick, how flip, how ready he would dodge the questions addressed him in cross-examination on the fine points of language." He said that Isom Donnell 'had so little affection in his dirty heart that he didn't go to the funeral of his wife nor of his mother-this beast whom the State accuses Dr. Alexander of seducing and teaching to become a grave-

DETECTIVES ATTACKED. Mr. Hugg attacked the detectives, the newspaper men and the sheriff and deputies for their considerate treatment of Cantrell while he was in jail. He described how Cantrell had been supplied with liquor, with money and shown favors since his arrest, despite the unenviable reputation he had made for himself by his stories of his own depravity. Hugg said the sheriff permitted Cantrell at the Thanksgiving dinner of the jail prisoners to say a prayer and a blessing over the meal. He asked the jury what it thought of a man of so low and degraded a mind that he could say a prayer to his God after being guilty of such heinous crimes as despoiling graves.

Before Mr. Hugg had concluded he apologized to the jury for the condition of his voice, which he declared to be bad. Mr. Hugg seemed to be the only person in the courtroom who had noticed it, as his fellow-attorneys and men who listened to him said they had never known a man to go on with such an argument for so long a time without breaking down. When he concluded Mr. Hugg said he could have ar-Alexander listened to the arguments of much longer time, but that he felt that his attorneys on both sides of the case. The summary ment for the State at 9 o'clock yesterday action was probably taken within the last

It is said the Governor assigned no cause for removing Mr. McDonald in his communication to him. If Mr. McDonald demands a hearing and desires an investigation the Governor will then make formal charges upon which he based his desire to remove Mr. McDonald. It is understood Mr. McDonald will demand a hearing, and may decide to take the matter into court. Mr. McDonald's friends claim the Governor took exceptions to Mr. McDonald because he was a member of the board which chose Joseph P. Byers, of Ohio, as the new superintendent of the Reformatory without consulting Governor Durbin. Other members of the board have been restless, fearing a similar demand for their resignations might be made by the Governor, but the Governor has taken no action regarding the other members and it is said none is contemplated for the present at least.

Governor Durbin sent a letter to Mr. McDonald last Monday in which he respectfully requested his resignation as a member of the board of managers without de-lay. Mr. McDonald replied immediately, stating that the Governor had given no cause for this sudden request, and in view of all that has occurred he thought proper that the Governor should give in full his reasons for making the request. The Governor's action against Mr. Mc-Donald is the first that has been brought since the Reformatory law became effec-

COLORED COUPLE ARRESTED.

They Are Charged with Drugging and Robbing an Ohio Farmer.

After being followed from Columbus, O. to this city, Annie Smith and William Burton, both colored, were arrested last night by Detectives Kurtz and Lancaster and John W. Dorgan, the latter a member of the Columbus, O., police force, on the charge of robbing a white farmer. The couple have been here for several weeks. it is said, coming here after they had "doped" a farmer in Columbus and robbed him of $159. The woman had begun to ply her work in this city and was arrested at the corner of Illipois and Georgia streets. It was said that Burton follows the woman and assists in robbing her victims. If a victim should offer any hesitancy in showing his money the couple use beer and whisky into which they throw a "knock-out drop." It was in this manner they robbed the man in Columbus. Burton was recognized last night by George Barlow, a former sergeant, as the man he arrested a few years ago for robbing a groceryman named John Cook at Blake street and Indiana avenue. Barlow said that Burton had been mixed up in several other robberies in this city before he moved away. Burton, when confronted by Barlow, admitted that he had been mixed up in several affairs in this city.

The Ousley woman lives at 1105 East Seventeenth street, and when Newhouse went there yesterday afternoon to take away some furniture the woman met Newhouse in a manner that told too plainly that tact was necessary. Newhouse was armed with papers from a justice's office, and thought nothing else was necessary. When he entered the woman's yard he said in a per-emptory tone that the furniture he wanted must be given him. The woman had not been educated in law and defled Newhouse, When he tried to force an entrance into the house he was tackled by the woman, who appeared to have the strength of a giant. She handled Newhouse in no gentle manner, and after he had been told that he could not take the goods he decided to send what testimony the State had neglected to for help. Bicycle Policemen Hull and Griffin responded, and their blue coats and large shields had an effect on the woman. The policemen told the woman that Newhouse was an officer and had a right to,

FOUNDER OF THE GREAT STARCH WORKS THAT BEAR HIS NAME.

He Came to This Country from Germany Many Years Ago-Deaths of Other Citisens.

William F. Piel, sr., eighty years old, founder of the starch works that bears his name, died yesterday morning at 5 o'clock at his home at 1229 East Washington street. He had been in ill health for more than two years. Last July he suffered a paralytic stroke, and this was followed by other complications. His illness compelled him to retire from active participation in business affairs in July of last year.

Mr. Piel was born in Dankarsen, Prussia, April 23, 1823. He remained on his brother's until he was seventeen years old, when he began to learn the cooper's trade. For a time he worked for $25 a year. He moved to this country in 1846, landing in Baltimore, Md. He did not remain in the East very long, but made his way to Indianapolis. Here he followed the trade of coopering until 1858, when he opened a general store.

In 1868 Mr. Piel, with others, started the first starch works in this city. The plant was located on New York street, near Pogue's run. It had a capacity of 200 bushels of corn a day. The increasing business caused the company to move to the southwest part of the city on Morris street, the site of the present large plant. Under Mr. Piel's careful management the business rapidly grew, until it is now one of the largest starch manufacturing plants in the

zens at Allen Chapel. Colored citizens of this city showed their appreciation of Abraham Lincoln last night at a meeting in Allen Chapel in memory of the birth of the first of the martyred Presidents. The church was filled and the audience was exceedingly enthusiastic. Gurley Brewer presided temporarily, and then Charles Brown took the chair. A number of prominent citizens of the city were at the meeting, and the audience was composed of the most prosperous colored men of Indianapolis. On the platform were Secretary of State Daniel E. Storms, Representative Kirkpatrick, William Whitaker, secretary of the Republican State committee, Mayor Bookwalter, George Knox, Gurley Brewer, and others. Mr. Brewer, who was instrumental in bringing the meeting about, received a letter from Governor Durbin explaining his absence from the gathering and expressing regret at not being able to attend. The first talk of the evening was made by Bishop Abraham Grant, who spoke of the gratitude of the negro for what the white man has done for him. George Stewart followed with a brief paper on "The First Voter." Mayor Bookwalter spoke of Lincoln's work for the colored race. When he mentioned the opportunities before the negro of to-day he was loudly applauded. Frank Fowler Brown then sang a solo. after which Daniel E. Storms spoke on 'Indiana." He gave reasons for being proud of the State and of its great de-velopments. Mr. Storms called particular attention to the number of illustrious men Indiana had produced. In closing the speaker gave the colored man some advice in regard to his chance of bettering himself and the community. He said the negro would never prosper if he frequented saloons and "shot craps," which brought forth a chorus of amens and applause. Gurley Brewer next made one of the best speeches of the evening on "The Party that Builds." He told of the rapid growth of the United States, and declared that i was due to the Republican party. Dr. C. R Atkins, of Anderson, read a paper on "The True Patriot," who, he said, must be a man of industrious, reliable and sober Others who spoke were Wesley Bridges on "Our National Emblem," William Lewis on "What the Monument Teaches," George Knox on "The Black Soldier," and J. H. Lott on "Abraham Lincoln." A banquet followed the addresses.

NEW SWINDLING SCHEME.

game has come to light through the operations of two fairly well-dressed men in this

The first case reported was that of Benamin D. Walcott, president of the Indianapolis Terra Cotta works, to whom the swindlers sent a letter. It was written on the stationery of the Central Hotel on South Illinois street, and told a story of two employes of the New Amsterdam Hotel, in New York city, who were on their way home from Hot Springs, Ark., and had reached Indianapolis when their funds ran out. The writers asked for a small loan until they could return to New York when "they would send it back by the next mail." They said they had waited on Mr. Walcott and other members of his family in times past when he stopped at the New Amster-dam Hotel. The young men appeared at Mr. Walcott's front door the other day and handed the letter to a servant. He gave his servant one dollar to give to his callers and kept the letter. Later he de-cided it was a swindling game. Mr. Wal-cott one day last summer stopped at the New Amsterdam Hotel with his daughter, when the latter was en route to Europe. That was the only time he had ever been a guest of the house. When in New York ne always stops at the Waldorf.

He thinks the young men make a business of securing names from hotel registers in New York and ply a profitable trade in securing money from prominent men in their travels over the country. Mr. Walcott considers it somewhat remarkable that the one day spent by him at the New Amster-dam Hotel should bear such fruit.
